On the Line—

To Serve, Not to Fight!

IT'S a safe bet that John X. Citizen doesn't know that there are 80 Government-owned corporations in existence, and that they duplicate services or make products that could be made by a private corporation.

It was not always so. It was worse. In 1945, for example, there were 101 such Government corporations.

This competition is of the worst kind. The Government always is in a position to lure from private industry its finest brains and talent. Government corporations pay no taxes, their deficits are paid by the taxpayer.

These are the basic facts. The startling details are to be found in the testimony presented at hearings on the late H.R. 8832 (now H.R. 9835, amended), a Bill to limit government activities competitive with private enterprise, and to establish an Anti-Government Competition Board.

Testifying at the hearings were all kinds of industry associations and key men from all walks of business. They spoke with the authority of experience.

Prominent warehousemen, for example, have done an outstanding job of presenting detailed evidence that commercial warehouses can serve the Government better and at a lower cost than its own storage operations.

Government warehousing is no small-time operation. It is estimated to be 560 million sq ft—three and one-half times greater than the nation's commercial space—an estimated investment of $2.25 billion.

If the Government were to liquidate these holdings, not only would it benefit by better services at lower cost, but gain about $56 million in taxes from commercial warehousemen.

The use of commercial facilities would cost the Government only for the space used. Currently, commercial warehouses are operating at about 70 to 75 per cent capacity. They easily could handle much of the Government's stores. They could expand as needed.

More important, it might be learned that, like Fibber McGee's closets, much unnecessary stuff is being stored. Let us not forget that, last year, a Government Operations subcommittee discovered that the Army was paying $200,000 a year to store rope unfit for its use.

The Government has overstepped its constitutional functions by competing with private industry. Your associations and industry representatives are doing their best to get it back on the right track. We urge you to support them to the best of your ability.

We want to serve our Government, not to fight it!

Yukkety Yak

The Defense Department's gross annual sales run around $10 billion.

... Government's use of public warehouse space is a little over one per cent of the total commercial space.

... General Services Administration's Federal Supply Service owns or leases a total of 5 million sq ft of storage space. Reports indicate that much of this space never was used; about 2 million sq ft is not currently needed.

THIS ISSUE: The motor carrier directory section is 300 listings larger this year than last. New statistical data have been added in the reference section.

... Speaking of statistics, these United States chalk up a daily net gain in population of over 7,000 or five persons every minute.

... If you like statistical doodling, start with these figures: A marriage takes place every 20 seconds; some one enters a hospital as a patient every 1.7 seconds; a child is born every 9 seconds; a death occurs every 21 seconds.

... Other population data: Immigration, 720 a day; emigration, 85 a day.

HAPPY DOODLING—We'll be glad to publish the best doodle in our next issue.

Successful Routing

To The Editor:

On Page 25 of your August issue there appears an article entitled, "Successful Routing of Motor Carrier Shipments," written by T. J. O'Laughlin, Jr. Study of this article indicates that it has been thoroughly prepared and contains food for thought, for both motor carrier and shipper. In view of this, may we have permission to reproduce the article?

Tax Breakdown

To The Editor:

Will you kindly advise if you know of any ready reference books that have been put out which show the taxes applicable in the various states on merchandise stored in a warehouse in that state. Do you know if a shipper who uses a pool car operation to a break bulk point is taxed on that type operation the same as he would be if he used a straight warehouse operation at the break bulk point. Is there any exception to the normal manner of assessment when material is stopped at a specific point for processing or milling—in transit?

I realize that each state—and in fact each city—has their own manner of assessing taxes. However, I am primarily interested in finding out if there have been any interpretations made as to whether or not taxes differ on the various means of transportation as outlined above.

John J. McHugh
Traffic Manager

Pepsi-Cola Co.
Long Island City 1, N. Y.

I am sorry that I know of no book giving the information you desire. Such law changes so much and often that a book would soon be out of date and without dependable value.

If goods are stopped in transit for purpose of preventing their loss or damage by processing the State cannot tax same. Otherwise the goods are subject to taxation. With respect to your bulk point question various state laws differ.—Leo T. Parker, DA Legal Consultant.

Movers Conference Re-elects All Officers; Asks Freedom of Operation, Sec. 22 Repeal

All officers were re-elected by the Movers' Conference of America at its Annual Assembly, in Boston, Mass., Aug. 1-3. Officers are: Russell E. Garrett, John F. Ivory Storage Co., Detroit, Mich., president; V. E. Freeman, North American Van Lines, Fort Wayne, Ind., vice chairman; H. J. Blaine, Lyon Van Lines, Los Angeles, Cal., secretary, and L. J. Sloan, Sloan's Moving & Storage Co., St. Louis, Mo., treasurer.

An adopted resolution calls for "freedom of operation without unwarranted limitations or restrictions." A second resolution calls for repeal of Section 22 of the Interstate Commerce Act, which permits the government to obtain transportation rates below those charged the general public.

In his annual report, Conference Chairman Garrett criticized the ICC and its Bureau of Motor Carriers for "participating in the partial disenfranchisement of movers' operating rights by inducing the Commission to grant authorization for haulage of special articles and for extensions and for emergency rights."

Other speakers included: ICC Chairman Richard Mitchell, Commissioner Owen W. Clarke, former Commissioner James K. Knudson, ATA President Jack Cole, NFWA President George Winkler, Jr., former PMTA President William T. Middleberg, MCA Traffic Director Francis L. Wyche, and MCA Director of Research Thomas R. Kingsley.

ICC Answers 12 Questions on Piggy-Back; Eastern Railroad Hearings Adjourned

Transportation of freight in trailers on rail flat cars is transportation by railroad, for which a motor carrier certificate is not required.

This and other Piggy-Back policies were established Aug. 6 when the ICC made public its rulings on the legal questions involved in the service. The original 20 questions were first submitted Sept. 30, 1953, by the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Co.

The questions were reframed by the Commission to make 12 basic issues, and the complete ruling handed down. Answers cover basic issues only. Other questions arising from this type service, which may require ICC determination, will have to be presented upon adequate records in appropriate proceedings, according to the ICC.

MHI Traveling Clinic

The fourth and fifth in a series of traveling clinics on materials handling problems, scheduled by the Material Handling Institute, will convene Oct. 5 in Boston, Mass., and Oct. 6 in Syracuse, N. Y. The clinics are conducted at the request of and in cooperation with local chapter of the American Materials Handling Society.

The answers ruled that railroads may transport trailers of private motor carriers and freight forwarders on flat cars under provisions of rail tariffs open to the public, without holding motor carrier operating authority.

Contract motor carriers, however, may not legally obtain such transportation of their trailers if the rail movement is within the scope of the contract carrier's permit. A contract carrier may, however, arrange for rail transportation of its trailer to points beyond the scope of its permit as an agent for the shipper.

In a separate action, on July 30, the Commission adjourned until Oct. 12 hearings in the "Eastern Piggy-Back Proceedings." The railroads had concluded their testimony.

Storage Facilities

States in the northern Great Plains, South Atlantic, and Pacific Coast regions are leading the way in building new refrigerated storage warehouses. Reporting this activity, U. S. Agricultural Dept. says its most recent survey showed a national gross capacity of 748 million cu ft in these structures. Freezer space totaled 347 million cu ft, and cooler space amounted to 401 million cu ft.

Trailer Trend

Statisticians in the government are weighing an industry prediction that by 1960 about 25 per cent of all freight moved in the U. S. will travel by highway trailers. This outlook may mean more economical shipping, in view of the increasing use of light metals in trailer manufacture. Estimated savings of $100 a year can be made in transportation costs for every 100 lb trimmed from trailer weight.

Shipping Policies

Revised procedures for shipping military goods by commercial carriers may broaden competition and save considerable money for the armed forces. From now on, military shippers are to consider bids from firms which handle their jobs on a package basis. Service includes packing, hauling, and delivery. In the past, the military rejected this type of offer in the belief that it was banned by ICC.

Sea-Train Survey

Army Transportation Corps is one of several agencies studying the advisability of moving government goods by sea-train between the Pacific Northwest and Alaska. A private report discussing the economics of such an operation has been under examination for weeks. Proponents of the sea-train idea see in it the possibility of reducing stevedoring costs and boosting coastwise trade.

Shortage Specter

Hints of a possible shortage of paperboard shipping containers are watched with interest in the Capital. Production of board for corrugated and solid fibre shipping containers in the first quarter was 6.5 per cent below that in the same months last year. Federal officials note that an Eastern conservation group urges businessmen to retain and sell old corrugated boxes and used fibre containers, which would become raw materials for the paperboard industry.

Award Winner

Development of a mobile steel dock with many possible applications to civilian and military needs has earned the 1954 National Defense Transportation Assn. award for L. B. DeLong, of Seattle. The winner, president of the DeLong Corp., will receive the award in October at the NDTA annual convention, in Pittsburgh. Essentially, the dock is a prefabricated barge which can be towed by tug to the spot desired and then converted into a wharf or pier where ocean-going vessels may dock.

Firm Finances

Freight received from shippers by 61 of the largest freight forwarders in the January-March quarter was lighter, but net income was greater, than in the comparable quarter in 1953. About 1.05 million tons of freight were received, as compared with 1.13 million tons a year earlier. However, forwarders recorded a net income, after taxes, of $1.03 million this time, substantially above the $750,000 of last year.

Port Equipment

Results of the use of a new leveling Gantry crane in port operations are awaited by the Army. Advantage of the crane is that a jib-boom attachment affords automatic leveling of cargo no matter what position the main boom is in. With a safe operating limit of 22,400 lb, the diesel-electric Gantry can move itself 150 ft per minute to any rail location on the pier.

Rolling Stock

Requirements for the total railroad rolling stock which would be used in the national distribution system in full wartime will be worked out by ODM. Advising ODM in this project is a consultant committee with members from railway companies, transportation groups, and industrial firms. Subcommittees will examine the need for freight and tank cars, locomotives, and short line equipment.

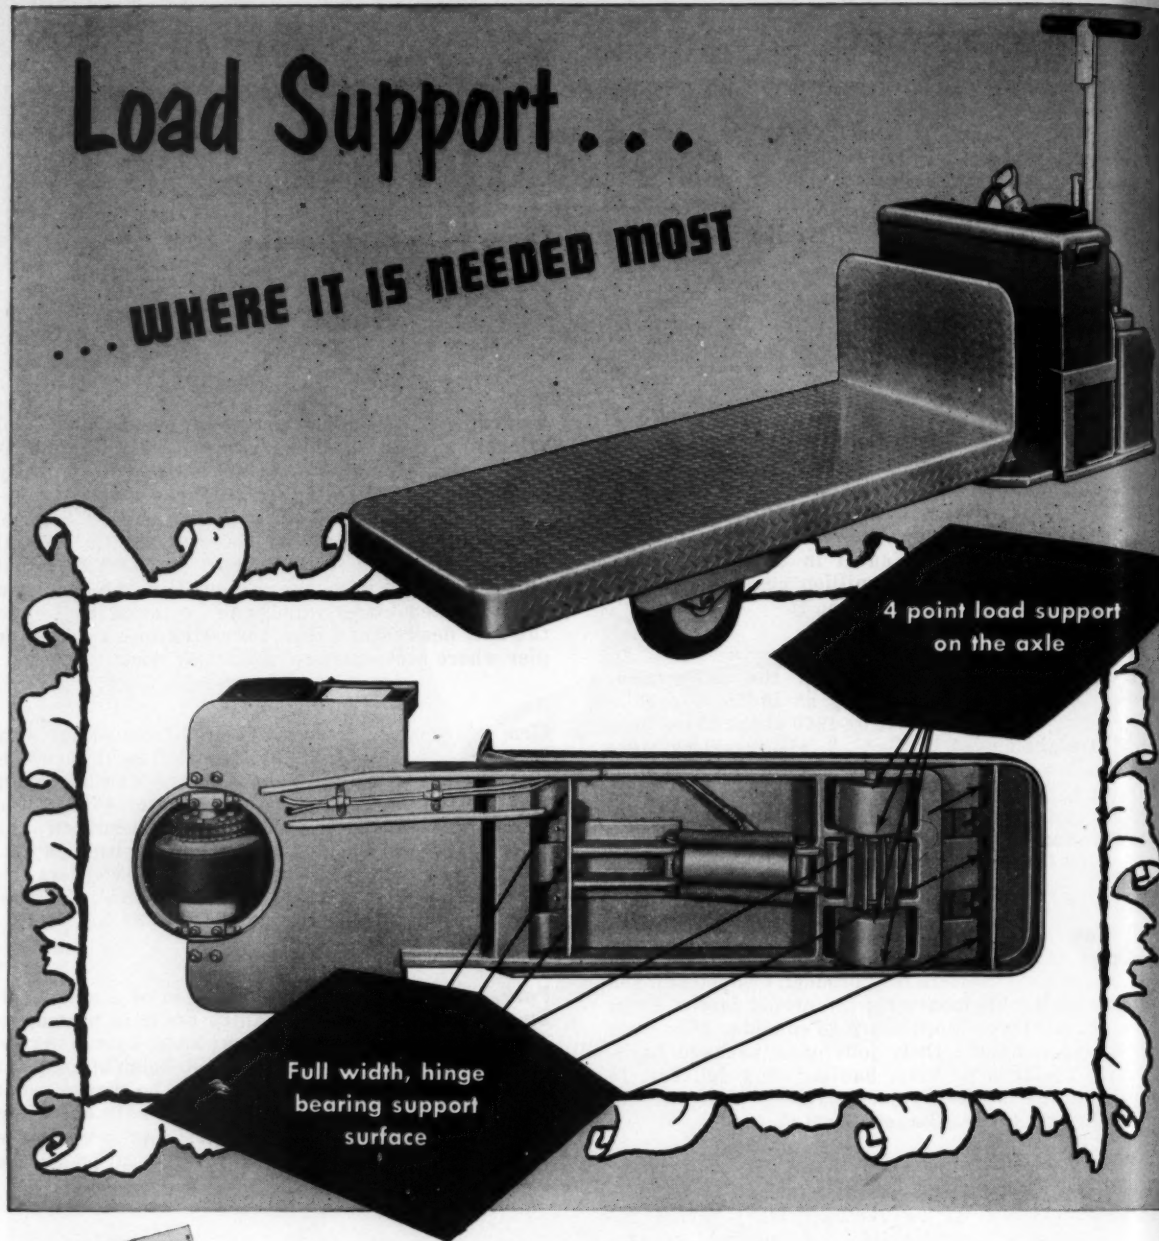

Grain Shelters

Bids for construction of enough government-owned bins to shelter 50 million bu of grain were being examined by U. S. Agriculture Dept. in August. Actual storage capacity bought in this new program, the agency warned, might not necessarily accommodate the full 50 million bu. A determining factor

Fourteen State Legislatures have met this year—all have enacted or considered changes in various laws involving motor vehicle registration fees, tax on gasoline, size and weight limits, and equipment

SEPTEMBER, 1954
Vol. 53, No. 9

Legislative Summary Of Highway Regulations

ALL OF THE 14 regular sessions of state legislatures meeting in 1954 have adjourned sine die, except NEW JERSEY. That legislature has recessed for various periods during the summer and reconvened on Aug. 2.

The following summary of 1954 state legislation is confined to trucks and motor carrier operations. It includes registration fees and special taxes, size and weight limits and motor vehicle equipment changes.

Registration and Taxes

Continued efforts to enact ton mile taxes featured this year's legislative activity. COLORADO changed its mileage tax from a cargo to a gross weight ton mile basis, effective Jan. 1, 1955. Property carriers over 8,500 lb empty weight will pay a tax of 1½ mills per gross ton mile operated. Registration fees for trucks were changed from a basis of rated capacity to a basis of empty weight. Fees are graduated from $8.75 if empty weight is 4,000 lb or less to $589.75 plus $7 per hundred over 25,500 lb.

Following the recommendations of a legislative interim committee in VIRGINIA, a mileage tax was introduced but was killed in committee. It would have imposed a tax of 6 to 21 mills per mile of average gross weight operated, on trucks over 18,000 lb.

N. J. Mileage Tax

A bill pending in NEW JERSEY would impose a mileage tax on trucks over 18,000 lb gross weight. The rates would range from 6 to 22 mills per mile except for mileage operated on toll roads. The VIRGINIA proposal and the bill pending in NEW JERSEY were based on the NEW YORK mileage tax, in effect since 1951.

A new law in ARIZONA provides a system of truck-tractor registration so that interchangeability of trailers is facilitated, at the regular fee for the tractor plus 1½ times the maximum fee for each trailer. Another ARIZONA law permits registration of non-resident commercial vehicles for 30-, 60-, or 90-day periods at reduced fees, without restriction as to number or sequence of such licenses.

Motor Fuel Taxes

Bills to increase motor fuel taxes were defeated in ARIZONA and VIRGINIA. The DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA increased its motor fuel tax 1¢ per gallon, thus making its 6¢ rate equal to those of the surrounding states of MARYLAND and VIRGINIA.

NEW JERSEY increased its gasoline tax 1¢ per gallon and provided that the proceeds shall be used for school improvement and the general fund.

The Governor of VIRGINIA recommended a 1¢ motor fuel tax increase but the proposal failed to get sufficient support to pass either House. A MASSACHUSETTS bill to increase the gasoline tax was referred to the next legislature, and a similar bill in MISSISSIPPI was given an unfavorable committee report.

KENTUCKY passed a new law providing that vehicles over 18,000 lb gross weight operating in interstate commerce must buy sufficient gasoline in KENTUCKY for the mileage travelled therein or pay the tax on fuel purchased elsewhere and used in KENTUCKY.

Highway Headaches And Their Cures

OUR HIGHWAY problem can be simply stated—we are running out of space. More than 53 million motor vehicles were in operation last year. More are expected in the future—and our highway building program is not keeping pace with this expansion.

That there is a problem is a recognized fact; that this problem must be solved, also is a recognized fact. The type of solution, and the methods to be used in arriving at the solution have, to this point, served as stumbling blocks.

Highway Supply

We must change our thinking about highways if we are to obtain the facilities demanded by increasing motor traffic. For one thing, the entire concept of highway supply must be changed. We can no longer expect to have all the highway space we need on which to operate our motor vehicles supplied virtually free.

We also must look upon our highways not merely as structures to permit movement of traffic, but as facilities for producing the safest, fastest and most economical transportation to which they can contribute.

In order to plan for the future we must know something of the present extent and condition of our highway system. This "system" usually includes roads outside of towns and cities. There are now approximately 3 million miles of such highways. There are also nearly 320,000 miles of city streets in communities of 5,000 population and over. But, highway mileage means little as such. Such figures do not reveal inadequacies of design, construction, safety or capacity nor do they point to bottlenecks created by specific deficiencies in congested areas.

Surface and Width

The surface and width of our highways is of great importance.

Simply stated, we are running out of highway space—if we cannot obtain this space as cheaply as in the past, we must readjust our highway outlook

As to surfacing, 62 per cent of our primary highways are paved, 22 per cent have a bituminous or other treated surface, and 13 per cent are still soil, gravel or stone, leaving but 3 per cent in the totally unsurfaced category.

Our main effort in the past 50 years has been toward getting highway users out of the mud, toward paving or surfacing of some sort and in this we have done an excellent job. But we have learned that surfacing alone is not enough.

As the number of automobiles and trucks demanding space on our highways has increased, we have learned that something more is needed for safe operation. This has become known as traffic separation. In more recent years we have, therefore, devoted much time and money toward dividing traffic.

Today we have 7,262 of main highway miles 36 ft (4 lanes) or more wide. Some 2,881 miles, or 40 per cent of the total, actually is divided. Nevertheless nearly 37 per cent of our surfaced primary state highways are under 20 ft in width, with only 5.9 per cent 27 ft wide and over.

In spite of all that has been done to improve our highways nearly 424,000 miles, 64 per cent, of the principal roads of the country need improvement and along these highways are 83,929 bridges which are inadequate for the traffic they now are handling.

Present inadequacies in highways include 15,115 curves sharper than they should be for safe driving at today's speeds; 560 grades, totaling 215 miles; which exceed what highway engineers consider the absolute maximum under conditions existing at each spot; and 916 other grades, totaling 400 miles, which are too steep for prevailing traffic conditions.

Highway Finance

Our present highways have been financed in two ways. One, by the states alone and the other with the aid of the federal government.

As amended from time to time the 1916 Federal-Aid laws provide for apportionment of federal funds by a fixed formula among the states. With certain exceptions, up to 50 per cent of the construction costs of projects on which federal-aid funds are used, is paid for by the state or by units of government within the state.

Federal funds are limited to construction projects meeting specifications, and located on fixed systems of roads. Expenditures of both state and federal funds allocated to them are made by the individual states, each of which plans, builds and operates its own highways. State funds maintain all highways.

Certain routes within the federal-aid primary system have, since 1944, been designated for inclusion in the National System of Interstate Highways to ultimately total 40,000 miles of connecting routes between the principal metropolitan areas, cities, and industrial centers of the country for purposes of national defense and also to connect at suitable border points with important routes in Canada and Mexico.

So far, 37,817 miles of these highways have been designated. It is expected that the Interstate System amounting finally to slightly more than 1 per cent of the total national highway plant will, when improved, serve a fifth of all highway travel.

The Interstate System of highways is the key system of the country but even on these highways conditions are not now ideal. For example, only 32,653 miles have a high type of paving; 4,996 miles have a bituminous treated surfacing, and 168 miles (located in nine states) have nothing but gravel, stone or soil and hence may be considered as unpaved.

The greater part of the Interstate System outside towns and cities is undivided. Of this 27,682 miles or 87 per cent of the total is but two lanes wide; 1,609 miles three-lane, and only 1,061 four lanes or more. Divided highways of four lanes or more comprise 1,487 miles.

FLORIDA, which produces 80 per cent of this country's phosphate output and close to half of the world's total output, has introduced some unique handling techniques to expedite transfer of the material from hopper car to ship's hold.

area. Modern handling equipment has been installed at these ports by the Atlantic Coast Line and Seaboard Air Line railroads.

1,500 Ton an Hour

One of the newer ship-loading installations has been put in service by the Seaboard line at Soddon Island, Tampa. Designed to maintain a steady flow of material with a minimum of dead time, the unit is capable of transferring 1,500 tons an hour from rail car to ship's hold.

The entire system is built around a unique car handling arrangement and a giant dockside phosphate elevator, with traveling

Phosphate is moved from rail car to ship's hold at a rate of loader and power cargo trimmer. System elements are unitized by an elaborate conveyor network.

An electric motor-driven loading tower supported on tracks above the dock eliminates the necessity of hauling the ship along the dock as the loading progresses. This tower, which travels from hold to hold to deposit the cargo and maintain the ship on an even keel, is equipped with a movable boom supporting a belt conveyor.

The boom terminates in a loading spout to which is attached an automatic cargo trimmer. The spout and trimmer can be lowered quickly into any hatch for placing cargo. With this arrangement, phosphate can be deposited in any

Track Layout

The track layout serving the elevator is arranged so that 90 cars can be unloaded through the plant without requiring the use of a switch engine. Eight covered track hoppers are provided 12 ft above the normal track elevations to receive the material from closed top hopper bottom cars.

The load tracks serving the plant are constructed on a descending grade to feed the loaded cars to the foot of an inclined approach to the receiving hoppers. The cars are pulled up the incline and over the track hoppers with a cable attached to an electric car haul engine.

It is operated by an attendant in a tower at the north end of the hopper house, from where he has an unobstructed view of the hauling and dumping operations.

Phosphate is dumped from the hopper cars into the track hoppers as they are pulled through the hopper house. The empties are released on a descending grade to roll through a spring switch, up a gravity kick-back, thence back through the switch to an empty car yard. The yard accommodates 100 cars.

By this arrangement all car storage is north of the plant, and there is no interference with plant operations from switching movements in placing loads or removing empties.

Additional storage tracks for loads and empties are provided on the island so that there is no difficulty in maintaining a constant flow of cars through the plant, regardless of the size of the ship taking cargo.

Automatic-control, retarder-type classification yards give the railroad a competitive advantage in handling freight by providing faster switching, lower operating costs, and less loss and damage

PUSH-BUTTON retarder-type classification yards, according to their proponents, give a railroad a competitive advantage in the business of freight solicitation.

Because retarder yards offer lower operating costs, quicker freight turnover, and less loss and damage, they also are instrumental in building a substantial volume of repeat traffic for the railroad-user.

Last year the railroads spent $1.2 billion on improvements, with a similar expenditure expected this year. Much of this money was and is earmarked for improvements in freight handling methods and facilities.

In turn, one of the most important milestones in the search for better freight handling techniques is the development of retarder classification yards.

Three Achievements

In 1952 when the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific Railroad Co. completed its $3-million Air Line Yard in Milwaukee, featuring a 25-track spread with automatic switching and retarder speed control, President John P. Kiley said:

"The Milwaukee Road made this investment to achieve three major results: To keep abreast of the mounting volume of classification business, to reduce per diem charges and operating costs by adopting faster switching techniques, and to cut down loss and damage to lading and cars that sometimes occurs in switching operations."

Basically the same reasons have been given by railroads making retarder installations before and since Mr. Kiley's remarks. Results have proved their validity.

While the investment in a new retarder yard is substantially more than the investment in a flat switching yard of the same capacity, most railroad people agree that the extra expense is justified.

Experts claim that where the expense of any new yard is indicated, the added expense of retarder equipment will more than pay for itself. Only in special instances, and under particular circumstances, do the railroad architects still advocate flat yards.

Retarder vs. Flat

The retarder yard is simply a modern development of the ordinary freight yard. Cars under control are rolled onto the classification tracks by gravity, resulting in a considerable saving in time and effort.

In the ordinary yard, arriving cars are placed on receiving tracks. They then are switched to classification tracks for grouping by destination. Finally, groups are moved from classification to departure yards for train formation. Cars are spotted in the various track locations by switch engines.

It is estimated that substituting gravity and retarder speed control for switch engines cuts the switching time in half. In addition, retarder control eliminates congestion and rehandling, and lessens the element of human errors.

Union Pacific

The Union Pacific Railroad, in 1948, completed its second retarder yard within a year with a $3½-million installation at North Platte, Neb.

Five miles in overall length, the North Platte yard is divided into four major sections: Receiving, incline, classification, and departure. The receiving yard consists of 12 parallel tracks for incoming trains, cars of which must be regrouped.

Switch engines push strings of cars from the receiving yard to the top of the West-to-East incline. Here the cars are cut loose singly or in small groups and are permitted to roll down the incline.

By means of electrically controlled retarders and switches, it is possible to control speed of the free rolling cars and direct them to any one of 40 classification tracks. These tracks fan out like a rake at the foot of the incline.

After cars have been grouped on the classification tracks, they are moved by switch engine to the 16-track departure yard where they are made up into trains.

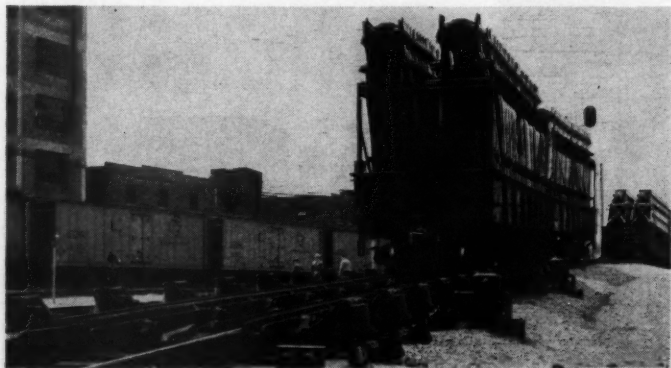

Five Control Points

Operations in the yard are controlled from five points: The retarder yardmaster's tower at the top of the incline, three control towers at the base of the incline, and the general yardmaster's office at the juncture of the classification and departure yards.

All five points receive on their teletypes copies of consists of incoming freight trains, each consist listing each car and its destination.

Multiple posting of information has been eliminated — reducing five or more previous writings to one; expediting settlement of all charges, countercharges, credits; simplifying new personnel training

By George E. Toles

Names and addresses are typed on a single line; interleaf construction saves stuffing, inserting, lining-up time

Trucking Firm Reduces Form Writing by 400%

MULTIPLE writing of information has been eliminated under a new form writing system developed by Richmond Terminal Trucking Co., general storage and trucking service on Staten Island, N. Y.

Under the new system, five or more form writings have been reduced to one, saving typing time, reducing errors, and eliminating checking and rechecking.

Shipments handled are of three main types:

Shipment Types

1. From interstate carriers to be delivered to consignees in the New York City area.
2. From shippers within the area to be delivered to consignees within the area.
3. From shippers within the area to be transferred to interstate carriers for delivery to other parts of the country.

Each of these types can be for either charge or cash customers, and for either prepared or COD shipments. Many of them involve imports and exports.

Before the new system was developed, Richmond used a variety of forms on which the same or similar information was written. As an example, incoming shipments (Type 1) were entered in a day-book from the carrier's freight bill.

Then a consignee's delivery receipt and a driver's manifest were written, the information was entered in a freight book for accounts payable, and an invoice was typed. This meant five separate writings of the same information, and considerable time wasted in checking.

New System

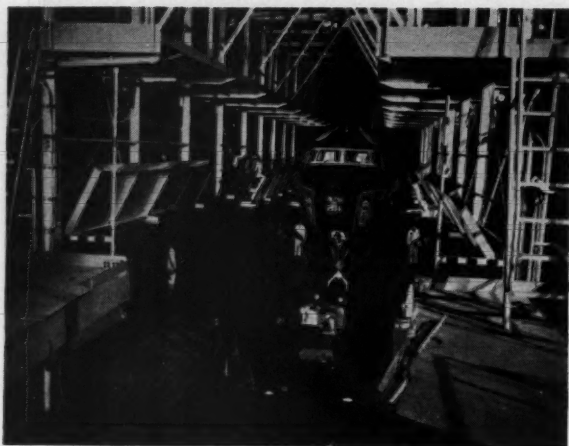

Under the new system, only two forms are used: A 6-part Continuous Fanfold Interleaved for shipments in the Type 1 category, and a similar 4-part form for Types 2 and 3.

The forms are identical, except that the 4-part form has no manifest copy and no consignee copy. Forms are designed for easy typing. Names and addresses of shipper, connecting carrier, and consignee can each be typed on a single line. The name and address of the party to be billed is typed in the Bill To section, which appears through the window envelope.

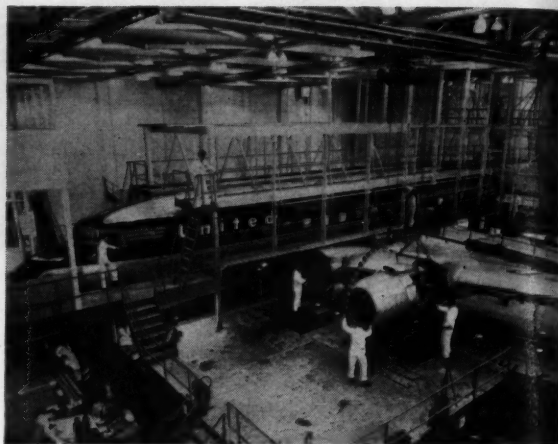

In this case, only the words Bill To need be typed on the horizontal line for that party. For instance, if the shipper were to be billed, his name would appear in the Bill To section and on the line marked shipper, the words Bill To would be typed.

If several shipments are received at one time from a shipper, to be delivered to one interstate carrier for several companies, all consignees up to six are listed in the consignee's space, each preceded by a number (1 to 6) which corresponds to the number placed

Meticulous maintenance is one of the keys to the low loss and damage ratio in air freight—United Air Lines keeps its fleet in top running order at this mechanized, push-button base in San Francisco

United's base occupies a 116-acre site in San Francisco

ONE OF THE major factors behind air freight's low accident rate and low cargo loss and damage ratio can be summed up in two words—meticulous maintenance.

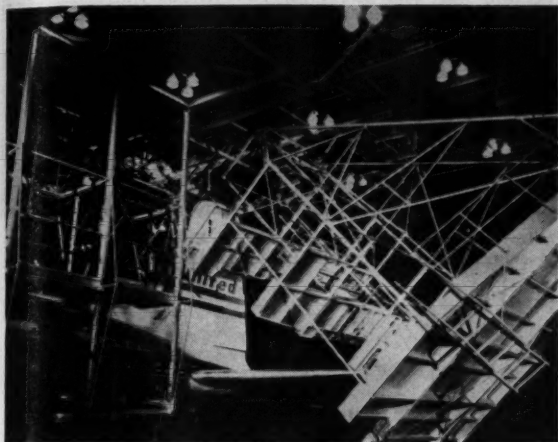

Mechanization has enabled United Air Lines to shatter all previous company records for fast and efficient overhaul of its cargo and passenger fleet at the 7-year-old maintenance base in San Francisco, Cal.

From its outset, the base accounted for a jump in United's overhaul rate of from 10 to 19 aircraft monthly. At this writing the monthly average is 23.

27 Planes Monthly

The push-button base occupies a 116-acre site, adjoining San Francisco's municipal airport. It consists of six overhaul hangars and an array of connecting shops in which 2,500 mechanics, engineers and craftsmen are employed. A building program now underway will double facilities this year, increasing United's overhaul rate to 27 planes monthly.

Major overhaul of all United's planes is centralized at the push-button base. Between trips to the base, the company's aircraft are kept in top order by line mechanics at 78 cities. They examine planes at each landing in daily service. Upon completion of every 100 hours of flying time, line mechanics conduct rigid inspections, with replacement of certain engine parts.

The company's fleet of more than 180 Mainliners and Cargoliners, both of which handle freight, includes seven different types of aircraft, ranging from 21-passenger DC-3's to 55-passenger Stratocruisers. Each plane, upon completing a set number of hours in service, is sent to the San Francisco base for overhaul. DC-6 Mainliners, for example, are overhauled when they near 1,500 hours of flying time.

Tailor-Made Dock

A DC-6 Mainliner has a wingspan of 117 ft, 6 in., and fuselage length of 100 ft., 7 in. Its empty weight is 55,000 lb. Several hours formerly were required just to bring up gear and position a plane of this size for overhaul.

United now completes the task in 10 minutes, using a giant dock which is chief among unique installations at the push-button base.

The DC-6 overhaul dock is 110 ft long and 131 ft wide. It is equipped with outlets for oil, cleaning solvent, pneumatic air and electricity. An elevator runs between its forward end and the second-floor level of adjoining shops. Another elevator is available at one side.

A DC-6 arriving for overhaul is towed into the dock by tractor. The nose of the big airliner fits snugly into a concave section of the dock. Fixed ramps extend under the wings and the fuselage is flanked by catwalks suspended from the roof on light steel girders.

Hydraulic jacks lift the plane several inches above the floor so that tires can be shucked off and the landing gear thoroughly examined. Then, twin frameworks of steel, tucked under the roof, are lowered around the tail. Each framework weighs about a ton but delicate counterbalancing permits them to be operated by a half-horsepower electric motor.

Denuding Operation

When the plane has been enclosed in its steel cage, 30 men go to work on the wings, cabin and engines. Technicians remove radio sets and electronic instruments from the cockpit; cabin workers uproot seats, peel away carpeting and wall fabrics; mechanics disconnect the engines and propellers; painters stencil fresh markings and insignia; sheet metal workers search wings, stabilizers and control surfaces for dents and scratches.

Parts of the denuded DC-6 begin to move from the dock by elevator, carts, dollies and other conveyances. Cockpit instruments, including communications equipment, go to the Radio, Electric and Instrument Shop. Engines go to the Power Plant Shop, along with propellers. Other parts are distributed among the tire, welding, sheetmetal, accessory, electroplating and cabin overhaul shops.

In the shops experts scrutinize incoming parts to be renovated or replaced. Each ship has special machines and equipment for its job.

The Power Plant Shop is the largest at the push-button base. More than 1,000 engines are overhauled here yearly, along with approximately 500 propellers. Assembly line methods are used in dismantling the huge engines and restoring them to new condition. Here's what happens after one of the Pratt & Whitney R-2800 engines of a DC-6 is lifted from the wing by electric hoist, placed on a dolly and tractor-towed into the Power Plant Shop.

Overhead Conveyor

First the 2,400-lb engine receives a quick steaming to remove outer grime, then it is disassembled, beginning with the reduction gear, cylinders, crank case and main case assembly. Cylinders and other large parts are hooked on an overhead conveyor while smaller components are placed in metal baskets. The 1,280-ft conveyor, driven by two 1½ hp electric motors, moves at speeds varying from 9 to 27 in. per minute.

Engine parts are borne to a hairpin-shaped tank which contains 17,000 gal of chemicals. A 5-hour bath removes all vestige of dirt and grease. Seven washers, operated by 20 hp electric motors, are ranged along the tank to churn up its contents and spew high-pressure jets.

National Policy for Air Cargo Urges Military-Civil Cooperation

President's request for review of federal aviation policies in light of future needs results in first clear outline for military and civilian cooperation toward development of new low ton-mile cost all-cargo air freight transportation service

LAST September, President Eisenhower asked the governmental interdepartmental Air Coordinating Committee to review our federal aviation policies and make recommendations for the future. The Committee reported on May first, and its report has been released by the White House.

Among other important policy statements, there is one on air cargo. This is the first time this aspect of air transportation has received such recognition.

There are four "planks" in our air cargo platform:

1. The further development of the air cargo industry, with particular emphasis on all-cargo services, is in the national interest and should be encouraged.

While the advantages of combining passenger and cargo carriage in the same aircraft are many, those who have been interested in developing real air cargo long have known that important limitations to this practice exist. As one example, combination aircraft frequently are unable to accommodate available traffic because of weight or bulk limitations.

If the use of air cargo is to grow on a sound basis, it is necessary that increased airlift be provided with aircraft designed specifically for cargo and operated on schedules designed specifically to meet the needs of cargo traffic.

2. Military and civil agencies should cooperate early in the development of all-new all-cargo aircraft. The low ton-mile cost aircraft so developed should be made available to civil operators at the earliest possible date consistent with military requirements.

This is good news for the cargo carriers. For much too long they have had to rely on obsolescent aircraft poorly suited for cargo; hence, uneconomic.

The rates which could be offered with such aircraft have not been low enough to attract a substantial volume of business and air cargo has, at best, been a marginal money maker for the carriers.

The greatest promise for an adequate and economical cargo aircraft for civil use appears to depend upon the development of such aircraft for the military services and, later, for their use by civil operators.

3. Federal agencies should, within the framework of sound principles of supply management, expand their use of civil cargo airlift as it becomes available for routine, non-emergency use.

Many of the agencies of the government are large shippers of cargo. While some agencies, particularly the military departments, have made limited use of the cargo services offered by the airlines, it is almost certain that a thorough study of government purchasing and distribution methods would disclose substantial advantages realizable from increased use of commercial air cargo.

4. A greater degree of stability should be given all-cargo carriers when certificated by the CAB by granting them certificates of sufficient duration to enable them to obtain adequate financing.

This policy statement is significant, since the CAB soon will have to decide whether to renew the temporary certificates now held by the all-cargo airlines and which expire in 1954.

Certainly such carriers have passed out of the experimental era, on which basis the Board issued five-year certificates. If not permanently certificated they at least should be granted a length of life long enough to warrant the considerable investment in modern cargo aircraft needed to implement the other parts of our national air-cargo policy. •

Diversified cargoes handled by steamship lines call for wide variety of gear, most of which must be multi-purpose in design. Here busses are stowed in hold — Cargo containers are sealed, locked — expedite handling, cut loss and damage

Ocean-Going Freight Gets

Competition has led steamship lines to improve handling systems, modernize

MANY shippers are under the erroneous impression that our Merchant Marine is not keeping pace with the other types of transportation, with respect to the modernization of its various facilities and services.

The impression is not without some justification, of course. However, as in many industries, a certain minority and not the majority is responsible for this unfortunate and not entirely true impression.

Major steamship lines are faced with the same general problems as the leading companies engaged in the other types of transportation. They are selling a service for which there is much competition. Because their basic equipment is comparable, the bid for shipper preference becomes a matter of superior service.

We of Moore-McCormack Lines know how effectively all steamship companies have improved their services and facilities — even if some of the shippers are not aware of it. We know, further, that it is not enough to keep abreast with competitive progress. We are constantly striving to develop services and facilities that will keep us out front.

Development Bureau

One highly successful innovation was the creation of the Moore-McCormack Lines Trade Development Bureau. This is a service designed to help exporters, importers, manufacturers and agents to find new sources of supply or outlets for their products.

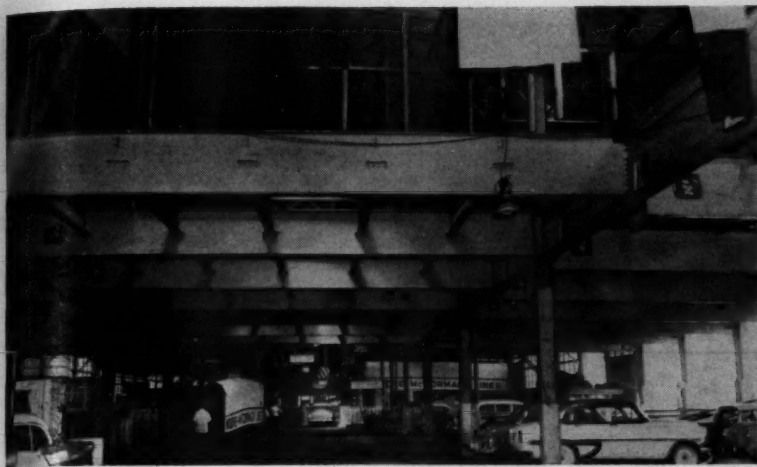

Loss and Damage Cut

Damage and pilferage of valuable cargoes long have been a problem to steamship companies and shippers. One of the several steps that Moore-McCormack has taken to combat this condition is the development of a cargo container. Perfumes, watches, drugs, cameras, and other valuable commodities packed in small units, are loaded in these containers as soon as they are received at the pier. When full, the containers are sealed, locked and loaded aboard the waiting vessel. They are not opened until they reach their final destination.

Claims on damaged cargoes also present a great problem.

Moore-McCormack Lines has set up a Cargo Damage Prevention Department. The function of this department is to advise shippers as to proper packaging and crating requirements. The advice given by this department covers not only the actual requirements during transportation but, also, the probable handling, storage and transportation at the destination.

Moore-McCormack is constructing this third deck, or mezzanine floor on Pier 32, New York. When completed, deck will provide shelter for 120 unboxed cars

New 8-bay truck dock accommodates up to 16 trucks, speeds loading process

Modern Handling

modernize pier facilities, and streamline their customer services

Experienced ship's officers advise shippers as to the extent of packaging required for their particular commodity without unnecessarily increasing the tare weight. As a result, many shippers and manufacturers have used this information to change or completely redesign their cartons, crates, bags or other containers.

Improved Pier Facilities

In recent years, the leading steamship companies have made many physical changes and improvements in their pier facilities to expedite cargo handling and provide more efficient service for the shippers.

Moore-McCormack Lines' Pier 32 in New York, when completed in 1940, was considered to be the most modern example of pier design and construction. However, since that time a number of improvements have been made to keep the pier's facilities continually modern. Only recently, the pier has undergone added rehabilitation and modernization to the extent of $300,000.

Among the changes in this double-deck structure was the replacement of three 6-ton elevators, which proved inadequate to handle the heavy traffic of the present fork-lift truck cargo handling methods. Now, there are two new 15-ton capacity elevators at the street end of the pier, and a 30-ton capacity elevator under construction at the river end.

Another improvement — which speeded traffic, increased the volume of freight being handled at a given time, and reduced congestion — was construction of an 8-bay truck dock, each bay capable of handling two tractor-trailer combinations.

Traffic conditions on and about the piers in New York, and the lack of sufficient sheltered pier

Magnesium Dock Board

A new series of magnesium dock boards, which incorporates many advances in design and engineering, has been announced by Mag-line Inc. Of all-magnesium construction, the Magliner boards are equipped with a new safety curb, which cannot be damaged by power truck wheel rims. According to the company, ordinary safety curb design permits the steel wheel rims on power trucks to strike against the curb. Easily handled by one man, the new dock boards are custom-engineered by the company to meet specific dock and operating conditions. They can be built to handle loads up to 20,000 lb.

High Power-Weight Ratio

A new series of compact gasoline fork trucks with a high power-weight ratio has been introduced by Yale & Towne Mfg. Co. The G-52 Series trucks are available with pneumatic or solid tires in 2,000-, 3,000-, and 4,000-lb capacities. Typical of the series is the 2,000-lb model. The larger models are built along the same lines, but are equipped with more powerful engines and have larger dimensions. The 2,000-lb truck can negotiate a right angle corner in a 57-in. aisle, or a right angle stack in a 112-in. aisle. Built on a 43-in. wheelbase, its overall length is 72 in. Height to the top of the steering wheel is 50½ in., and to the top of the channel as low as 68 in.

Printing Wheel

Fast economical marking or addressing of shipping cartons, sheet metal, towels, rubber goods, and other curved or flat surfaces is promised in the Roll-A-Matic, newly announced by DRI-flo. The unit consists of a self-inked printing wheel, with spring return and handle, that applies a mark by rolling. The printing wheel accepts interchangeable type, of patented base-lock design, so that copy may be changed as often as desired. Specially formulated inks can be used for marking rubber, glass, plastics, ferrous and non-ferrous metals, wood, cloth, and paper.

Walk-Over Trailer

Mercury Mfg. Co. has developed a new heavy-duty trailer which uses compensating rear axles to prevent load shifting over rough terrain. The new unit has a capacity of 15 ton and dimensions of: Width, 60 in.; length, 120 in., and platform height of 22¾ in. It is fitted with a 3/16-in. checkered steel deck, a loop handle hitch and a C type coupler on the rear. The wheels are 15 x 8 x 11¼ in. with pressed-on solid rubber tires.

Long-Load Centered Cab

A one-man, centered cab, permitting balanced carrying of lengths of steel, pipe, or lumber, longer than the overall length of the trucks themselves, has been made available as an attachment on medium and heavy-duty International four and six-wheel trucks

by International Harvester Co. The cab, 50 in. in width, is a one-man version of the Comfo-Vision cab. The attachment includes an outrigger front-load support on the chassis and lower front fenders protected with floor plate. Along each side of the cab, which is placed in the center of the chassis in normal location, space is provided for carrying objects as much as 21 in. in width. The carrying space runs the full length of the truck.

Cold Storage Trucks

Lewis-Shepard Products, Inc. has developed a line of electric trucks specifically designed for work in cold storage freezers. This line includes riding type fork trucks (pictured), riding type straddle trucks and walkie trucks. Among the special features incorporated in this line of trucks for corrosion-resistant construction are undercoating, special hydraulic oils, and plating of exposed moving parts to prevent rusting. Other optional features on the riding type trucks include stainless steel steering chain, canvas padding in operator's compartment, spot lights on carriage and mast, and locking type lift and lower controls.

Model SX-24 Tractor Ox is the newest addition to the Barrett-Cravens Co. line of electrical industrial trucks. The operator stands in a space provided in the rear of the unit. This battery-powered unit has a 200-lb rate drawbar pull at 3¼ mph; an unloaded speed of 6¼ mph, and a speed of 3¼ mph with a 10,000-lb load. A 24-volt battery is standard. Forward and reverse push button controls and dual trigger hand operated brake controls for operation with either hand are located in the steering handle. The Tractor Ox also is available in walkie, sitdown, and radio remote control models.

Paper Pallet Handling

A new method of industrial palletizing for handling and shipping bagged and packaged commodities has been introduced by American Cyanamid Co. Basic component of the new system is an Acopak Pallet. This consists of a paper sling fitted with paper tubes. New type bayonet forks, easily attachable to any fork truck, slip into the tubes. This enables the palletized load to be lifted, carried, and stacked in single-, double-, or triple-deck tiers. No thicker than heavy wrapping paper, the paper pallet is particularly adaptable to loading and unloading freight cars and motor trucks.

Flexible Conveyor

R. T. Sheehan Co. has introduced a flexible conveyor unit which compensates for floor dips and rises of up to 6 in., and which can be curved horizontally to the right and left on a radius minimum of 54 in. A motor in head car is connected through a speed reducer to a shaft mounting to spike pulleys that engage the belt positively. These pulleys are secured near the two ends of the shaft to leave clearance space between them for guides that are attached to the belt under surface. These guides ride inside central channel guide section in the head-take-up and intermediate cars, so the belt will ride smoothly in tracking position of any curve path to which it is set.

5-Ton Puller

The Ohio Hoist & Mfg. Co. has developed a 5-ton puller to meet revised U. S. Army Specifications. Utilizing a special aluminum alloy, the new puller weighs less than 60 lb, yet has the required 6 ft lift. A puller can be used in place of a hand hoist or, as shown in the illustration, may be employed horizontally to move heavy machinery or for other purposes. Other unique features of the puller are the disc brake and the handle. The brake is composed of alternate bronze and steel discs; it is not affected by moisture and will not rust. The safety handle gives positive protection against overloading. It bends when the load reaches approximately 10 tons.

Outdoor-Indoor Use

The new Models F-4R and F-6R Erickson Power Lift Trucks, with 4,000 lb and 6,000 lb capacity, are designed for both outdoor and indoor use where a smaller, compact truck is needed. With large pneumatic tires on all wheels and 12 in. center underclearance, it has excellent traction on rough or soft ground, and easily clears high sills, tops of steel ramps, etc. The short wheelbase and turning radius enable these models to maneuver in close quarters.

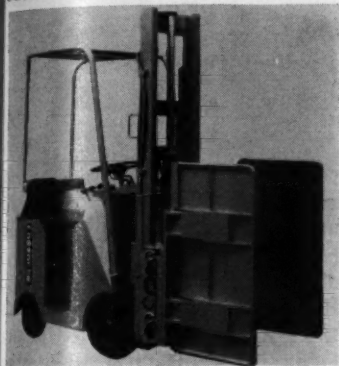

Ballast box at back of truck over rear steering wheel permits varying the balance weight for each individual job. An International U2A engine, heavy duty 11 in. clutch and dual transmission provide 4 speeds forward and 4 speeds reverse, up to 25 mph.

Besides standard forks, others are available for specific jobs, also fork sidershifter, hydraulic scoop and other attachments. Standard lift is 108 in., lowered height 80 in.

Carton Clamp

More efficient handling of cartons, cases, packages, crates and similar loads is now possible with this new carton clamp attachment, developed by Towmotor Corp. Partial, or fully unitized loads can be picked up by these large-face, pivot-mounted arms, and safely transported or high-stacked without the use of pallets or other devices to hold the load together. Arm faces are covered with a special rubber coating which reduces pressure necessary to grab and hold loads, and it protects loads from scratching and other damage. Designed for use with any Towmotor model, the carton clamp is activated by a special operating mechanism.

Hydraulic Lift Truck

Precision Equipment Co. announces production of the Shop Caddy, a 2-wheel hand truck which embodies a hydraulic lift capable of raising loads of as much as a quarter ton. The Shop Caddy is used for loading and unloading trucks and for stacking kegs and boxes. Its lifting platform, in the down position, is at floor level for easy loading. When loaded, a few strokes of the lever will raise the load to the proper height. A 4-speed pump ram is furnished as standard equipment so that the lifting speed may be set according to the load.

Hand Truck Safety

Swinguard is the name of a new device designed as a safeguard against accidents which may result from hand trucks slipping from the grasp of an operator. Made of heavy braced steel, the new attachment may be used with any standard two wheeled hand truck. It is joined to the truck approximately halfway up the back by heavy duty clamps. Principle of operation is to force the hand truck forward and away from the operator if his grasp slips. The new safety device is made by Twin-Tilt Truck Co.

A new version of the Kwik-Mix Moto-Bug, available as hopper or flatbed platform materials handling unit, has been added to the Kwik-Mix Co. line. The new unit features a 50-per cent hopper capacity increase, 4-wheel balance, and an operator's seat. With more power than earlier models, it was designed for heavy-duty work. Hopper capacity is 2,000 lb, with 15 cu ft of space available for the load. As a platform truck, the R-15 model has a load area of 34 x 54 in. Equipped with stake pockets, the platform has a latch for quick dumping.

Transportation Reference . . .

THIS section contains reference data of use to transportation executives responsible for operation of truck fleets. The type of data essentially is that subject to legislative changes and, therefore, requires periodic checking to insure compliance with the law.

During the past 12 months, for example, several states made important changes in their highway truck size and weight limitations. Mississippi raised its practical gross weight limits on six different tractor-trailer combinations from 52,600 lb to 55,900 lb; New York made changes on the same six combinations, from 61,500 lb to 65,000 lb.

Attention also is called to changes in safety regulations in three states, Michigan, Virginia and Mississippi.

The facts have been compiled from a number of sources. At the time of publication they were checked for accuracy. However, in the coming months there may be changes, brought about by new legislation or the natural course of new equipment design and production.

A new set of tables will be found in the Reference Section this year. The new tables include: U. S. Government Fleet Operation Data; Trailer Registrations, 1951-53; Total Truck Registrations by States; Indexes of Tons Transported in Intercity Service, and Comparison of Intercity Truck Tonnage, 1953-52.

NOTE ON "W" AND ASTERISK

Except when shown by asterisk or when followed by the letter "W," the above gross weight limits are the limits fixed by state law.

When shown by asterisk the above limits are computations made by the National Highway Users Conference to show what it considers to be practical gross weights where gross weights are arrived at by application of one of the formulae shown below under Footnote "X."

In making these computations, wheel base was arrived at by deducting 8 ft. total over-hang front and rear from permissible overall length of unit or combination; tandem axles were considered to be a minimum permissible distance apart. When actual over-hang is less than 8 ft. additional gross weight will be possible.

When followed by the letter "W," the limits shown are maximum possible weights where gross weight is determined by permissible axle weight. These limits are possible only when each axle carries a gross weight equal to the permissible axle limit as shown.

that gross weight of any vehicle or combination shall not exceed 65,000 lbs.

GROSS WEIGHTS COMPUTED BY FORMULAE

Computation of Gross Weights according to formulae, based on distance (in feet) between first and last axles, for States identified by State Size & Weight Limits chart by Footnote "X." It should be remembered that the figures in each column represent only a mathematical extension and are governed by Legal Overall Length Limits for single units and combinations of particular states. Also, that formula computations are superseded in some instances by specific limits given in the chart.

Safety Equipment

Required & Permitted on Trucks, Truck-Tractors, Trailers & Buses

As Specified in I.C.C. Safety Rules & Regulations, State Motor Vehicle Laws & Official Rulings . . . and Compiled by National Highway Users Conference

TABULATION OF SAFETY REQUIREMENTS ON PAGES 54 & 55

EXPLANATION OF I.C.C. REFERENCES

‡—The I.C.C. Motor Carrier Safety Regulations apply to "Automotive Safety Equipment" on vehicles operated by common and contract carriers ("for hire" carriers) of persons or property and by private carriers of property, when operated regularly in interstate or foreign commerce, except when operated wholly within a municipality, between contiguous municipalities, or within a zone adjacent to and commercially a part of any such municipality or municipalities. When vehicles of common, contract or private carriers are transporting explosives or other dangerous articles the last-mentioned exception does not apply.

†—Requires "a device or other means of preventing or removing ice or frost" from windshield.

*—I.C.C. neither approves nor disapproves any individual required item. Its Motor Carrier Safety Regulations, however, set forth certain constructional details or performance standards to which certain items must conform. Reference should be made to the Motor Carrier Safety Rules for complete details.

Directory of For-Hire Motor Carriers

THE following pages contain listings of for-hire motor freight carriers all over the country. The data include such basic information as the carrier's general area of operation, his principal terminals, basic freight handling equipment, types and number of highway vehicles, cargo insurance, tariffs, and a brief list of any specialized services he may have to offer.

To use the data, the traffic manager need but consider the fundamental problem: The cities between which the cargo is to be carried. For example, assume that a shipment of goods must be made to Waco, Texas; that the nearest warehousing point is Denver, Colo.

To locate a motor carrier for that shipment, we can employ these two methods:

1. We turn to the state of Colorado, then Denver. Then we go down the listings to determine if any of the carriers operate in Texas, and have a Waco terminal.

2. The process may be reversed by determining if there is a carrier in Texas who has terminals in Waco and Denver.

For the sake of brevity, it has been necessary to use many abbreviations. An explanation of those abbreviations will be found on Page 115.

Because DA constantly attempts to improve the usefulness of its motor carrier listing information, the Editor will welcome criticism and suggestions.

Highway Headaches . . .

Demand for highway space is not distributed uniformly over the streets and highways now existing, but varies widely according to volume and traffic movement. For example, the streets within municipalities represent less than 10 per cent of the total highway mileage, yet carry nearly half of all traffic.

Many other highways, while not often subject to traffic jams, have deficiencies such as narrow lanes and shoulders, poor surfaces, sharp curves and steep grades. On rural roads of local importance, lack of all-weather surfacing is a major deficiency.

It also must be realized that highways have a definite length of life, and unless they are replaced at a rate equal to or in excess of the rate at which they wear out, the number of miles giving satisfactory service is automatically reduced.

AASHO Survey

In a recent survey of the federal-aid systems by the American Association of State Highway Officials (AASHO), 66 per cent of the network was found to be below tolerable standards.

By systems, the percentages were: rural primary, 68 per cent deficient; rural secondary, 62 per cent, and urban, 67 per cent.

The Automotive Safety Foundation, participating in full-scale engineering studies in seven states, found the following percentages in need of improvement: On rural state highway systems, from 36 to 97 per cent; on county primary road systems, 32 per cent to 84 per cent, and on major arterial streets in cities, 38 per cent to 61 per cent.

Probably the best available indication of the estimated costs of improving our street and highway network is found in a study by the Subcommittee on Highway Finance of AASHO. This shows that a total of $5.8 billion worth of work should be done annually over a 15-year period. To this total must be added an estimated $250 million for repayment of highway debt now outstanding, bringing the average per year to $6.05 billion.

Of the money actually put into highway work each year $4 billion would be expended for resurfacing and widening, reconstruction or entirely new construction to meet the backlog of existing needs, the improvement of facilities which have dropped below tolerable limits of structural conditions, traffic service or safety, and on needs occurring during the 15 years when this backlog was being met.

The remainder would be required for maintenance, administration, and other program costs. Further evidence of the requirements of the total highway network of the country is the estimate of AASHO for the Federal-aid systems.

$32 Billion Backlog

Here value of backlog work alone is set at $32 billion, including, for example, $1.5 billion in resurfacing; $10.2 billion in reconstruction and $5.2 billion for replacement or modification of bridges. Fullest possible utilization of existing facilities, consistent with economic and safety factors, is assumed in the above estimates.

Thus, facilities are scheduled for improvement only if they have dropped below tolerable limits and after every effort has been made to improve operational qualities by means of improved traffic engineering such as the use of one-way street systems, channelization, installation of progressive time signals, parking controls and the like.

If we need to spend some $30 to $32 billion on our highway within a 15-year period we must plan to achieve this result.

State Road or Highway Commissions in various parts of the country have not, however, been idle as their problem has worsened day by day.

In planning for the future we must strive to avoid making mistakes such as have been made in the past. One of the first things to do is to re-examine our classification of roads and then study the demands that each group should make upon available funds for maintenance, rehabilitation and new construction.

Highway Administration

It might be that our systems of highway administration could be improved and certainly there is room for study of the problem of fair distribution of highway costs and the possible development of a different system of user charges. Certainly we should put an end to diversion of highway funds to non-highway uses.

We must adopt a different attitude toward the drivers of automobiles and trucks. These people are really consumers of road space which can be supplied virtually free or at a price. Since we do not have and probably cannot supply all that is needed free, we must do so at a price.

Eventually those who operate cars and trucks, at least in the more heavily congested parts of the country, will buy much of it from private capital through the use of toll roads just as they buy anything else. But toll roads are only a partial answer.

Finance Suggestions

There are several ways in which the tremendous amount of money can be raised to pay for highway improvement.

1. During World War II a 2¢ per gallon Federal tax was put on gasoline and Federal excise taxes were levied on motor vehicles, tires and parts as emergency measures intended to be repealed when the war was over.

Some of these taxes still are being collected and going into the general revenue of the government to be used for all sorts of purposes. These taxes are discriminatory and should be repealed but, if continued, might well be devoted to highway improvement through allocation to the states. It has been estimated that such an allocation would cover about $2 billion per year of the needed funds.

2. A considerable amount of money, perhaps as much as $200 million per year, could be devoted to highway purposes if the states could be prevailed upon to put an end to the practice of using funds raised by state gasoline taxes for other than highway purposes.

3. In many states there is the possibility of increasing license fees for all vehicles to provide additional revenue for highway purposes.

4. Although billions of dollars worth of bonds have been issued by states, counties and municipalities over the years there is still a possibility of financing highways through borrowing on the general credit of the governmental subdivisions. This method should be avoided if possible.

5. There is a type of borrowing which has been followed for toll roads. This would involve the sale of what are known as revenue bonds.

Much education may be necessary if increased taxes on gasoline and additional license fees are used to raise highway funds. Not so much education of automobile and truck owners but education of those who nearly always oppose moves of this sort before State Legislatures.

Such opposition comes from organizations composed of retailers of gasoline and automobiles, who would prefer to see the funds borrowed as has been done in the past, but will be less and less possible in the future.

Such an attitude is mistaken, since the automobile and the truck have become indispensable to so many owners that they will not hesitate to pay what is necessary to obtain and keep them. • area, create problems in handling unboxed cars, trucks, jeeps and tractors. It is common practice along the New York piers to store these vehicles, while awaiting loading, on the "farm" or street area in front of, or adjacent to, the pier.

Pilferage and damage to cars awaiting shipment under such conditions has prompted Moore-McCormack Lines to construct a third new deck, or mezzanine, on Pier 32. This will cost approximately $100,000 but, upon completion, will provide a sheltered area for 120 unboxed cars.

Handling Facilities

Materials handling facilities at the piers have changed considerably in the past few years. The fork truck and pallet no longer is a novelty; it is a necessity.

Many commodities are shipped directly from the manufacturer on skids and pallets, and must be handled at the pier by fork trucks. Moore-McCormack Lines has a fleet of 67 fork trucks and over 7,000 pallets in New York alone.

The handling procedure is as follows: Palletized loads are taken from trailer-trucks, brought into the pier proper and dropped. Fork trucks pick up the loads and drop them at the proper storage bay for eventual loading on board ship.

In the case of loads assigned for storage on the second deck, there is an intermediate handling step. Two fork-lift trucks are assigned to each elevator to pick up loads and drop them on the second deck, adjacent to the elevator. Other fork trucks then pick up the loads and haul them to the storage area.

Because lift trucks serving the elevators constantly go through a start-stop, forward-reverse sequence of operations, it was found that excessive costs in terms of time, labor and parts were being encountered due to clutch wear-out and replacement. In fact, a clutch could be expected to withstand no more than five weeks of operation.

In 1950, 10 heavy fork-lift trucks equipped with a torque drive, were put into operation. Almost two years later four additional units of the same model were added to the fleet.

The clutch repair record for our entire fleet of 70 fork-lift trucks averages a clutch repair job every four months per truck; but on all 14 automatic-drive machines, there were only two transmission repair jobs during the 1950-1953 period.

Pneumatic Tires

While the general practice is to use hard tires on fork trucks for an operation such as ours, we have found that under certain conditions, hard tires can cause serious and expensive damage. Specifically, we have found that vibration from the operation of hard-tired fork trucks on the second deck of the pier caused substantial spalling of the concrete ceiling of the lower level.

It does not follow, of course, that there is no place for fork-trucks with conventional drives.

We have seven medium-duty fork-lift trucks that have been in continuous use at our dock for 13 years, the oldest trucks we have. According to maintenance records, they are giving us as good and economical service as other mechanical drive trucks, which have been in use for six years.

This is pointed up by a comparative study we made between our maintenance figures and the U. S. Government Maintenance and Replacement Standards which appeared in a recent issue of a Federal publication called Munitions Material Handling News.

According to these standards, the useful life of a fork-lift truck is reckoned at seven years. During the first year, according to the standards, it is economical to spend up to 50 per cent of replacement cost for maintenance and repair work, and decreasing percentages of replacement cost in the succeeding years. In the seventh year, it is not economical to spend any money.

Following is the comparative data for three of the old medium-duty fork-lift trucks for the fourth and fifth years of use:

AGE	Replacement Cost (1953): $4,532
	FOURTH YEAR	FIFTH YEAR
Government Standards:	20%—$906	15%—$680
Moore-McCormack Truck No. 1:	7%—$293	9%—$425
Moore-McCormack Truck No. 2	5%—$233	11%—$519
Moore-McCormack Truck No. 3:	5%—$204	8%—$344

In other words, the standards indicate that for the fourth and fifth years it is economical to spend 20 per cent to 15 per cent, respectively, for maintenance and repair. The figures in terms of per cent of replacement cost for these particular machines are $906 and $680, respectively.

The above table lists the equivalent figures obtained from our maintenance records. (The percentages are given to the nearest whole number.) For the 13-year span, the average percentage figure for these fork-trucks is approximately 11 per cent.

To keep an accurate and close check on our materials-handling equipment, monthly records are kept for the time, labor and parts required for each piece of equipment.

Stevedoring Gear

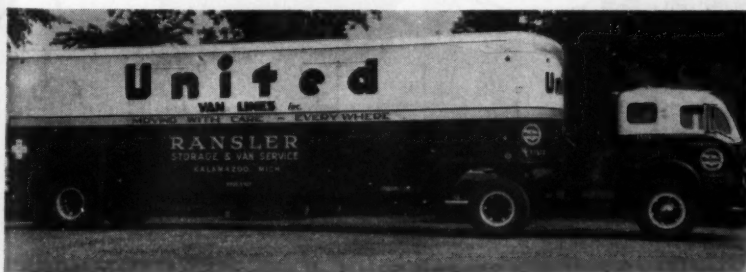

As a final example of the progress being made to expedite and handle cargoes safely and efficiently, we can point to the developments in basic stevedoring gear. There are shippers who point to this equipment with the remark that there has been little change in its design since Noah loaded the ark.

However, new products constantly are being shipped, creating a demand for new and specialized gear for efficient handling during the loading and unloading operation.

Five gear men are kept busy repairing this gear, and creating new types of gear as the need arises.

In all fields of endeavor—product design and manufacture, transportation, sports, and general business—the stimulating effect brought about through honest competition always is very beneficial. Moore-McCormack Lines, as well as the other reliable steamship companies, will continue expending every effort toward improving their future service to shippers. *

... Phosphate Loading

Four 42-in. conveyors take the material from the track hoppers to the ship. No. 1 conveyor is located directly under the hoppers and is fed by eight adjustable speed roll feeders from the hoppers.

This conveyor discharges onto the No. 2 conveyor, which elevates the material approximately 57 ft above the dock, where it is discharged into a chute, thence onto No. 3 conveyor. An automatic weightometer is provided in conveyor No. 2 to weigh material carried over the belt.

No. 3 conveyor extends horizontally for a distance of approximately 450 ft at a height of 47 ft above and parallel to the face of the dock. A movable tripper is provided on conveyor No. 3, which can discharge the contents of the belt at any point within the middle 400 ft along its length to boom conveyor No. 4 on the mobile loading tower.

Cargo Sampling

It is essential that the phosphate of lime percentage be accurately established. This requires that a truly representative sample of the material loaded be obtained. This is done by an automatic sampler located in a building at the point of discharge of No. 2 conveyor.

At this point sample buckets on an endless chain completely cut the flow of phosphate every 16.6 seconds, taking one-half of one per cent of the entire cargo for the original sample.

The original sample is dumped from the buckets into a hopper at the top of the building, from which it is carried over a magnetic separator to remove tramp iron. From the magnetic separator 99 per cent of the sample flows into a rotary crusher, where it is reduced to particles not exceeding 3/16 in. in size. One per cent is removed as a moist sample.

The material from the crusher is passed downward through three eight-way rotary splitters to reduce the quantity of retained sample, then through a fine grinder and another eight-way rotary splitter.

The material rejected by the splitters is fed to a small bucket elevator which returns the reject to No. 3 conveyor for loading. The final dry sample obtained from a 10,000-ton cargo is approximately 30 lbs of material composed of small fractions of phosphate rock from each 6.9 tons of rock loaded.

Roll feeders are powered by four 5-hp variable speed motors operated in pairs for flexibility in operation. All belts travel at 530 fpm. Belt No. 1 is powered by a 15-hp motor; belt No. 2 by a 200-hp motor; belt No. 3 by a 75-hp motor, and belt No. 4 by a 40-hp motor. All motor controls are electrically interlocked to prevent flooding of the belts when any one of the motors is stopped or started.

The traverse of the mobile loading tower is accomplished by two 7½-hp motors driving through worm gears. The boom on the tower is raised and lowered by a hoisting drum direct connected through a gear box to a 30-hp motor.

Three motors of ½ hp, ¼ hp, and 20 hp are provided on the automatic cargo trimmer to actuate its various movements. Power and interlocking are carried to the motors and controls on the loading tower by means of trolleys supported on the roof of the gallery for the No. 3 conveyor.

Loud speaker talk-back stations are strategically located along the conveying system to give the plant foreman direct communication with each operator at any time.

The plant is most favorably situated to receive and dispatch ships, being located on a sheltered main deep water channel within 10 minutes of the heart of downtown Tampa. •

After emerging from the tank, cylinders are bombarded with ground walnut shells to clean them further. The cylinders and their interior parts then are examined for minute imperfections. Steel parts are put through a process in which metal filings, drawn by powerful electric currents, form a pattern around flaws, no matter how small.

Overhead Conveyor

Reassembled cylinders are booked on a 1,650-ft overhead chain conveyor, which is used for storage. Cylinders remain on the chain until required in assembly of the engine from which they came. Reassembly of an engine is completed in about 12 days. Consequently, the plane in the overhaul dock is equipped with a different set of engines so that its return to flying service will not be delayed.

While the cylinders are being restored or, if warranted, replaced by new ones from stock, other parts of the engine are undergoing careful inspection. Each part is numbered so that in reassembly components will go back into the original engine. Worn parts are replaced to the extent that an engine becomes practically new after its fifth or sixth overhaul.

The reassembled engine goes to test cells for a 3½-hour run-up before recertification for use. The test cells have heating and refrigeration equipment which simulates the range of temperatures encountered in flight. Carburetor performance is checked in a special shop which has 80 tons of machinery to create atmospheric conditions at any altitude up to 50,000 ft.

Meanwhile, inch-by-inch inspection of doors, windows, electrical wiring and various fixtures of the DC-6 fuselage has been completed and the plane is ready for reinstallation of its components.

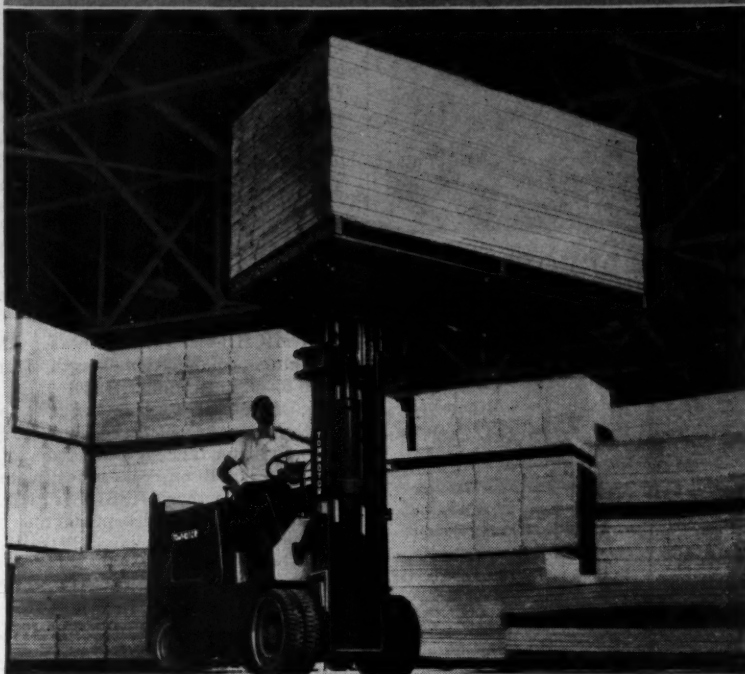

Out of the shops come engines, propellers, cockpit instruments, interior furnishings and miscellaneous equipment.

Five days after its arrival at the push-button base the DC-6 is ready to return to the airways. But first it must undergo try-outs. A crew from United's Flight Test Section takes up the Mainliner and puts it through stiff paces. Cameras focused on the instrument panels provide a record of the flight from beginning to end. The crew bears down, checking the performance of engines, propellers, carburetors, heating system, ice-removal equipment, radio and navigational aids, automatic pilot, landing gear and other apparatus.

On the sixth day the DC-6 Mainliner is back in service. •

Legislative Summary . . .

A NEW YORK law increased the gross weight formula from 750 (L + 40) to 850 (L + 40) for any single vehicle or combination having three or more axles, but limited the maximum gross weight to 65,000 lb. The law provides that the combination length limit shall be reduced from 50 to 45 ft on and after Feb. 1, 1960. Another law reduces from 14 to 10 ft the spacing between any two consecutive axles which are limited to 36,000 lb.

A MICHIGAN law increases the maximum combination length from 50 to 55 ft until Jan. 1, 1960.

A MISSISSIPPI law increases weight from 52,650 to 55,980 lb, and the weight on tandem axles from 28,650 to 32,000 lb on certain designated highways. Another MISSISSIPPI bill

New laws to require mud flaps or mud guards on trucks and trailers have been passed in MASSACHUSETTS, MICHIGAN, MISSISSIPPI and VIRGINIA. Similar bills were killed in KENTUCKY, MARYLAND, and NEW YORK. The following states previously had enacted this requirement: CALIFORNIA, CONNECTICUT, GEORGIA, IDAHO, ILLINOIS, MINNESOTA, NEW JERSEY, NEW YORK, OHIO, OKLAHOMA, OREGON, PENNSYLVANIA, TEXAS, WASHINGTON, WISCONSIN.

New laws in MICHIGAN and VIRGINIA require turn signals on all vehicles manufactured or assembled after Jan. 1, 1955. The MICHIGAN law also requires turn signals on vehicles when the 24-in. or 14-ft rule applies as provided in the Uniform Vehicle Code. KENTUCKY amended its law to exempt taxicabs from mandatory turn signal requirements. Proposals that would have required turn signals on all new vehicles in KENTUCKY and MARYLAND died upon adjournment of the legislatures.

Bills in COLORADO, MASSACHUSETTS and NEW YORK to require the use of governors were killed.

Bills in MICHIGAN and MISSISSIPPI that would have required vertical exhausts on Diesel trucks died with adjournment of the legislature. Proposals for vertical exhausts in KENTUCKY and VIRGINIA were killed.

A new law in MICHIGAN requires fleets of commercial vehicles to be equipped with built-in windshield defrosters maintained in operable condition at all times. A NEW YORK bill to require defrosters was vetoed.

Vehicle Inspection

Governor Dewey of NEW YORK has recently approved a bill requiring semi-annual inspection of motor vehicles at state licensed stations. The law provides that no motor vehicle shall be operated after Sept. 1, 1955, unless a certificate of inspection is displayed.

A RHODE ISLAND law requires all taxicabs, buses, jitneys and other vehicles used for the transportation of passengers for hire to be inspected before registration and from time to time thereafter as is deemed necessary by the Registry of Motor Vehicles. The law provides that a fee of $2 shall be paid to the Registry for each inspection.

An approved amendment to the VIRGINIA law requires an inspection sticker to be displayed on the windshield at all times.

A NEW JERSEY proposal would require motor vehicles to be inspected once each year (now required twice a year) and would give the director of the Motor Vehicle Division power to require vehicles more than five years old to be inspected twice a year.

engine from the receiving yard arrive at the top of the incline, the switchman working on the track below cuts the cars loose in accordance with a switch list previously prepared by the retarder yardmaster.

Sitting on the track side of his tower with windows on three sides, the retarder yardmaster has an unobstructed view of the receiving yard to his left, the classification yard to his right and the cars at the top of the incline in front of him. This enables him to make any last minute switching changes necessary as a result of bad order cars noted from the inspection pit. He gives new cutting directions to the switchman via loud-speaker.

Tower Control

As cars roll down the incline they pass under control of A tower, the first of three subsidiary control towers. A tower operates the first three retarders and the first three switches. The first retarder, largest of the yard's nine, has 28 air-activated cylinders and is located half-way down the incline. Like all the other retarders, its job is to slow down a rolling car by pressure on the wheel sides.

Towers B and C are located directly opposite each other further down the yard from Tower A. Each controls three retarders (26, 24 and 22 cylinders) and 18 switches.

Capacity of the yard is 4,400 cars: Receiving yard, 1,400; classification yard, 1,400 and departure yard, 1,600.

The yard contains a considerable number of other features pertinent to faster freight handling.

Located on the approach to the incline from the receiving yard is a concrete under-track inspection pit. From this vantage point, an inspector can check cars as they pass over and detect those in need of repair.

Communications System

The yard's communication facilities include teletype, two complete radio stations and an intercommunication system.

For giving directions and contacting workers in the yard, there are 103 intercommunication speakers and 26 large paging speakers spotted at points along the yard tracks. All speakers can be operated from a master control panel in the general yardmaster's tower.

Milwaukee Road

One of the world's largest and most modern classification yards was completed late last year by the Milwaukee Road. Located in Bensenville, Ill., the new yard has 70 classification tracks ranging in capacity from 52 to 102 cars each, and with a total capacity of 5,311 cars.

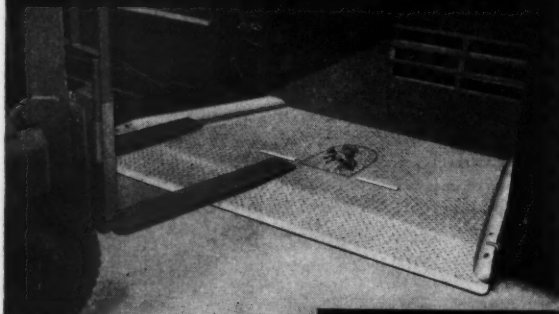

Trains arriving in Bensenville yard, where all freight cars to, from and through the Chicago area are switched, are pulled by a train checker who records the car numbers on tape recorder. Typed lists showing the car numbers together with the weight, description of contents and the track numbers to which the cars are to go, are dispatched by pneumatic tubes to all involved in the switching operations.

Continuing on to a receiving track the cars are inspected and journal box lids raised to permit lubrication of axle bearings.

Next the trains are pushed by diesel locomotives to the crest of the grade which is about 20 ft above the area where the cars enter classification tracks.

At the crest a switchman separates cars that continue by gravity into the various tracks.

"UNDER-SIDE" DESIGN MAKES THE DIFFERENCE

Only in Bronco Magnesium Bridge Ramps do you get the exclusive "Under-Side" construction design that gives you greater strength, longer life with a minimum of weight. Bronco's "Under-Side" design is only one of the reasons why the 12,000 lb. capacity bridge ramp illustrated above is doing an outstanding job reducing materials handling costs at Alexander's Market Warehouse, Glendale, California.

Write today for complete information on all the features of Bronco Bridge Ramps.

- * Low initial cost — lifetime service
- * Maximum strength — minimum weight
- * Safety tread surface for full traction
- * Positive, adjustable locking device
- * Side guards designed to prevent tire damage or equipment run-off
- * Carloading or Truck Ramps — capacities from 1000 to 12,000 lbs.

Bronco's reinforced construction features offer maximum strength with a minimum of weight.

Panel Control Switching

In an office at track level at the crest, a switch foreman seated at a desk-type routing panel, can, by pushing one of 70 buttons, automatically line up the switches that permit a car or group of cars to roll onto any of 70 tracks. An illuminated panel indicates to the foreman-operator how he has set up in advance in consecutive order the next five cuts or groups of cars to be switched.

Half way down the gravity grade there are two towers, one on each side of the yard, from which operators seated at desk-type consoles control the speed of the cars. Through huge windows located about 30 ft above track level the operator has exposed to his view the crest of the yard, the retarders and all switches.

On the console is a miniature diagram of the yard layout under the control of the operator, also an illuminated panel showing the next five routes set up by the switch foreman at the crest.

Speed Control

On the console in each tower are six levers which the operator can set to vary the speed at which cars leave the retarder. By pushing a lever in one direction for a heavily loaded car and reversing it for a light car the retarders automatically apply the required pressure to slow the car to the desired speed, as well as provide required spacing between cars being switched.

The master and intermediate retarders can be set so that cars leave these retarders at speeds from 6 to 12 mph. Cars are controlled to leave the final retarders at speeds of 4 to 10 mph, depending on how heavily they are loaded and how easily they roll. The grade of the tracks after leaving the final retarder is such that the cars gradually slow down approaching other cars on the same tracks.

Yard Performance

In January of this year General Manager J. J. O'Toole reviewed the performance of the new yard and listed improvements in those major respects:

1. More cars are being segregated, both by train and by final destination.
2. As a result of faster switching time, classification time has been reduced. With flat switching, 6 to 12 hours had to be allowed for switching into new trains. The new time allowance is two hours.
3. The new facilities have made a substantial improvement in the on-time performance of time freights. In some instances schedules have been changed to allow trains to depart earlier.

Indiana Harbor Belt

The Indiana Harbor Belt late last year completed a $3.5 million project for improving the switching layout and operations of its Blue Island Yard retarder-classification setup in Riverdale, Ill.

A 35 per cent capacity increase, from 2,800 cars to 3,800 cars was effected by constructing seven new classification tracks and lengthening the 32 existing tracks.

Grand Junction Yard

A similar 1953 development is a completely new retarder yard built by the Denver & Rio Grande Western, at Grand Junction, Colo. It utilizes the push-button control method. Within 1½ hours after arrival, unblocked, a train will put out of the yard completely classified, leaving behind only rip-track and local cars.

The D&RGW classification yard consists of three groups of eight tracks each. Each group is served by an individual retarder, and a master retarder serves all three groups.

Santa Fe

The Santa Fe's electro-pneumatic car retarder system at Argentine, Kan., completed five years of service this May. The yard has been fully automatic since January of last year.

In addition to receiving and departure facilities, the classification yard consists of 56 tracks, accommodating from 31 to 54 cars each. The tracks are divided into 8 groups of 7 each.

Seaboard Airline

The Seaboard Airline Railroad has an $8.5 million classification yard and diesel shop under construction at Hamlet, N. C., where five of its lines converge to form a major terminal.

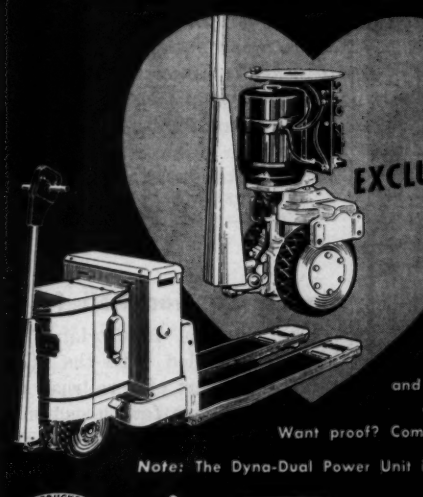

Most of its 58 classification tracks, which have capacities ranging from 14 to 60 cars, were completed this spring. In the entire yard, with its classification and auxiliary tracks, there will be a total of 240 switches, 57 of which are in the classification tracks and which will be operated by electro-pneumatic control.

Other completed or in process retarder-classification yards include: The 50-track Silvis Hump Yard of the Rock Island Lines, with a daily capacity of 3,325 cars; a Boston and Maine yard, at Somerville, Mass.; the Pennsylvania Railroad's Conway Yard, near Pittsburgh, Pa.

Also, Southern Railway's new yard at Chattanooga, Tenn.; Southern Pacific's Houston, Tex., yard; The Southern's E. K. Norris Yard, in Birmingham, Ala.; and the Reading RR's yard, in Rutherford, Pa.

Container Demand

Slight upswing in container operations at the start of the second quarter was observed by U. S. Commerce Dept. Indications were that demand was growing, following a relatively stable first quarter. As compared with totals for first quarter 1953, textile container demand in the first three months this year was about the same; shipments of steel barrels and drums were down by 2.8 per cent; and veneer basket output was nearly 8 per cent higher.

Direct negligence must be proved in cases involving damage to other persons' property

Generally speaking, all negligent persons are liable for damages caused other persons. However, a recent higher court held that if the alleged negligence is not the proximate or direct cause of damage, there is no liability.

For instance, in G— v M—, 264 Pac. (2d) 490, it was shown that the owner of an automobile garage and filling station was notified by police officers of the city of the imminence of a flood.

The highly volatile and inflammable fuels and materials in the garage were caused to come in contact with the electric wiring, lights, and signs and a destructive explosion and fire was caused to occur.

The fire spread to and destroyed a warehouse. The warehouseman sued the owner of the garage for damages, contending that the fire, and the resulting destruction of the warehouse building were caused wholly and solely by reason of the "carelessness, recklessness and negligence of the garage owner in failing to turn off the electrical current."

It is interesting to observe that the higher court held the garage owner not liable. This court explained that the garage owner's failure to turn off his electrical fixtures in anticipation that the flood would bring his inflammable materials in contact with his electric wiring was not the direct cause of the destruction of the warehouse. Hence, there was no liability.
